

FOUGHT TO SEE HIS DEAD BRIDE.

Young Widower, Denied Admission to Funeral by Wife's Uncle, Creates Scene at the Church During Services.

HE COULD NOT SUPPORT HER

When She Had to Go to Relative's Home He Forbade Boy Husband to See Her and Persisted Even in Face of Death.

It may be that eighteen-year-old John Burke was not a fit man for a husband, but he loved the little girl whom he made his wife five months ago, and when she died in her uncle's home and they refused to let him look at a last time on her dead body he fought at the church door for a chance to see her in her coffin.

Only the interference of his friends and relatives prevented a most trying scene. They managed to calm the boy, and he sat through the funeral service in quiet and followed his wife's body to the grave, heartbroken not to have seen her once more.

Before her marriage the dead girl was Mary Wilford. She lived with her uncle, Frank Wilford, a Williamsburg electrician, at No. 94 Morton street. Young Burke met her about a year ago. He was then seventeen and she sixteen. They thought they were grown up and so, seeing only misery in this world so long as they lived apart, they went away secretly five months ago and were married.

Could Not Support Her.

After two weeks came the awakening. Young Burke had no work. He could not support his bride. She had to go back to her uncle. He took her in on the condition that Burke should not see her any more. Burke could do nothing but consent. The young wife pined without her husband. In a little while she developed quick consumption. Day before yesterday she died. Her husband was not at her bedside. When he heard that Mary was dead he went to the house of her uncle and asked to see her body. Wilford refused him.

The funeral was set for to-day. It was to take place at noon in the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul. Burke determined to make a last effort to say farewell to all that was left of his wife. He went again to the house of her uncle. Wilford, expecting that Burke might make trouble, had two policemen on guard. They kept him back and threatened him with arrest if he trespassed on the Wilford premises.

As White as the Corpse.

So the young widow went to the Lee Avenue Court and asked the Magistrate for an order permitting him to see his wife's body. The Magistrate refused because he had no jurisdiction. In great anger, Burke and his mother, who was with him, got into a carriage and drove to the church. They arrived there before the funeral cortege.

Burke took his stand in the church vestibule. He was red eyed and as white in the face as was the corpse he wanted to look upon. Finally the hearer and the mourners drove up to the church. The pall-bearers lifted the coffin out and bore it into the vestibule. Burke shivered when he saw it and sprang forward.

"Let me see my wife," he said, in a tense voice. "It is my right."

He pushed aside the pall-bearers and almost made them drop their sad burden.

"John, John," cried the boy's mother, "come away, come away. You're in church."

She caught him by the coat and dragged him back. Other mourners surrounded him and pushed him into a corner. The pall-bearers went on up the aisle with the dead wife's body. Finally the young man was calmed and went in by his mother's side. He listened, weeping, to the service, and when they brought the body out and drove away to Calvary Cemetery the boy and his mother followed silently in a carriage.

FINED FOR SHAKING HANDS IN COURT

Lawyer Who Greeted Negro Will Carry Ruling of Magistrates to Court of Appeals.

Aaron Kahn has applied to Justice Scott, in the Supreme Court, for a mandamus to compel Recorder Goff to sign an order in conformance with his decision denying Kahn the right of appeal from Magistrate Hogan's action in fining him $10 for alleged violation of a rule of the Board of City Magistrates. The argument will be heard next Friday, the District Attorney opposing.

Lawyer Kahn, who has practised twenty-four years, was fined $10 in Harlem Court on complaint of Court Policeman Charles Smythe, who charged Kahn with speaking to and shaking hands with a negro as he entered the courtroom. Magistrate Hogan declared this to be in violation of the following rule ordained by the Board of City Magistrates:

"As a further aid to the maintenance of order in and about said Magistrate's court, all persons are prohibited from accosting any visitor to any of said courts with a view to ascertaining the errand or business of said visitor in said court, unless such inquiry be made by direction of the Magistrate presiding."

Kahn refused to pay the fine, declaring it to be an outrage and illegal. Judge Hogan finally suspended execution of sentence.

Kahn appealed. The Recorder denied the appeal, but did not sign the order. Kahn wants it signed so he can appeal to the Appellate Division.

THE BIG STORE A CITY IN ITSELF SIEGEL COOPER & CO.

SIXTH AVE. MEET ME AT THE FOUNTAIN. 18th & 19th STS.

Every Winged Hour Throbs With Activity at This Vast Store.

AND Saturday! Seems as if it were a festal day. The people flock here en masse. Into the Departments featuring Wearing Apparel of every sort, Shoes, and everything for personal adornment and comfort as well as home needfuls, they surge in endless streams.

This great store becomes a fascinating picture of stirring business. But it never becomes a hot, uncomfortable store. The ceilings are high, ventilation is perfect.

The methods of ascension to the various floors as well as those of descent are safe and reliable. The electric elevator system is perfect. Thousands of people ascend and descend daily. The Moving Stairway and the Inclined Elevators (also moving "stairways") take you from floor to floor when you don't want to walk. All you do is to step on. The mechanism does the rest.

But we're forgetting the special merchandise attractions for Saturday. Let the Departments speak for themselves.

Everybody Seems to Be Shouting Cheap Clothing Prices.

THE matter has assumed the form of an epidemic, with indications of no abatement. Each dealer asseverates that his prices are lower than those of his competitor. The fact remains, however, that the average man does not care to boast that he is wearing "cheap" clothes. He isn't so particular, though, if he obtains better clothes than usual for less than usual.

It All Depends Upon Circumstances.

It is a widely known fact that The Big Store gives you satisfactory clothing value in every instance. AND WE DO THAT EVERY BUSINESS DAY OF THE WEEK. We make no price comparisons, give no fictitious valuations. The special offerings in our Clothing Stores on the Main and Second Floors for Saturday represent limited quantities—130 Men's Overcoats and 180 Youths' Suits. The prices at which they are marked indicate that they will be eagerly snapped up. The morning demand will probably exceed the expectation.
